Director's Notes

"Once upon a time..."

...In a nearby community, a high school with an exciting theatre program got zapped. Not by a witch's spell or a curse, but like the rest of the world, by a global pandemic. (This is not news). While in the time of distance learning, we pivoted to online presentations, and plays without spoken dialogue performed in an empty theatre.

The chapter of the story we opened this year shined the light of hope back on to stage. We could perform in person and have in person audiences. Sure, masks are still part of our Covid-affected lives, but we are surely much closer to happily ever after now than we were.

I am proud of our cast, crew, and parent volunteers for their patience, their talents, and their tenacity for coming back to this school year with a new determination, renewed vision, and the excitement of live theatre once again. Not "the end," but a new beginning.
